

Contents

Overview of the seven volumes	ii
About the Author	iv
Also by Analoly T. Fomenko	v
Are History and Astronomy incompatible? By Béla Lukács	xiii
Ages in Chaos. By Dr. Eugen Gabowitsch	xiv
Preface by A. T. Fomenko	xxiii
From the Publisher	xxxii

Chapter 1

The Middle Ages referred to as the “Antiquity”. Mutual superimposition of the Second and the Third Roman Empire, both of which become identified as the respective kingdoms of Israel and Judah

1. Identifying the Second and the Third “ancient” Roman Empire as the same state. A chronological shift of 330 years	1
1.1. A dynastic description of the Second and the Third Roman Empire	1
1.2. Biographical parallelism between the Second and Third Roman Empires. The 330-year shift	7
2. The correlation between two different dating methods illustrated by the superimposition of two epochs from the history of Roman Papacy one over the other. A brief scheme	29
3. The superimposition of the Israelite (Theomachist) Kingdom over the Third Roman Empire in the West. A shift of circa 1230 years	30
4. Identifying the theocratic Kingdom of Judah as the Third Roman Empire in the East. A shift of circa 1230 years (short diagram)	45
5. Saint Basil the Great in the alleged IV century A.D. and his prototype in the XII century A.D. – Jesus Christ. The resulting shift of 820 years	46

Chapter 2

The famous reform of the Occidental Church in the XI century by “Pope Gregory Hildebrand” as the reflection of the XII century reforms of Andronicus (Christ). The Trojan war of the XIII century A.D.

1. “Pope Gregory Hildebrand” from the XI century A.D. as a replica of Jesus Christ (Andronicus) from the XII century. A chronological shift of 100 years. The Scaligerite chronologists have subsequently moved the life of Christ 1050 years backwards, into the I century A.D.	51
--	----

1.1 Astronomy in the Gospels	52
1.1.1. The true dating of the evangelical eclipse	52
1.1.2. The Gospels apparently reflect a sufficiently advanced level of astronomical eclipse theories, which contradicts the consensual evangelical history	53
1.2. The Roman John Crescentius of the alleged X century A.D. as a reflection of the Evangelical John the Baptist from the XII century A.D. A biographical parallelism ...	57
1.3. “Pope” Gregory VII Hildebrand from the Roman chronicles dated to the XI century A.D. as the reflection of Jesus Christ (Andronicus) from the XI century A.D. A biographical parallelism	63
1.4. The Bethlehem Star of the alleged I century and the famous supernova explosion of circa 1150 (subsequently shifted to 1054 by the chronologists)	74
1.5. The Crucifixion of Jesus on Mount Beykos, or the evangelical Golgotha, which is located outside Constantinople, near the shore of the Bosporus	75
2. Identifying Livy’s “Ancient Imperial Rome” as the Third Roman Empire after a 1053-year shift	80
3. Identifying the Tarquinian war of the alleged VI century B.C. as the Gothic war of the alleged VI century A.D. with a 1053-year shift	92
4. The parallelism between the Gothic War of the alleged VI century and the Nika rebellion that took place in the same century. No date shift here	107
5. The Trojan war of the alleged XIII century B.C. superimposed over the Gothic war of the alleged VI century A.D. after an 1800-year temporal shift forwards	111
5.1. The first accounts of the Trojan War: their presumed authorship, as well as geographical and temporal origins	114
5.1.1. The general conception of chronological shifts	114
5.1.2. The strange fate of Homer’s epic poems	115
5.1.3. Dares and Dictis – the “alleged participants” of the Trojan War	117
5.1.4. The mediaeval troubadours and the Franks telling us about the Trojan War	119
5.1.5. The ruins of a small mediaeval fortification that Heinrich Schliemann suggested to refer to as “the remnants of the ancient Troy”	120
5.2. The tale of the Trojan kingdom. A rough comparison of the Trojan War to the Gothic War	124
5.3. The legend of a woman and the casus belli of the Trojan War	144
5.4. The beginning of the war	146
5.5. The fall of Naples (the “New City”) = the fall of Troy. The mediaeval aqueduct and the “ancient” Trojan Horse	150
5.6. The “ancient” Achilles = the “ancient” Valerius. The “ancient” Patroclus = the “ancient” Brutus	156
5.7. The “ancient” Achilles = the mediaeval Belisarius. The “ancient” Hector = the mediaeval Gothic king Vittigis	158
5.8. The “treason” of the “ancient” Achilles = the “treason” of the mediaeval Belisarius ...	159
5.9. The “ancient” Troilus = the mediaeval Gothic king Totila. The “ancient” Paris = the “ancient” Etruscan Larth Porsenna	160
5.10. The end of the war	162
5.11. Other legends of the Trojan War	163
5.12. What is it about the Trojan chronicles that surprises the present day historians the most?	169

5.13. How similar are the respective descriptions of the Trojan and the Gothic War?	170
5.14. Other erroneous datings of the Trojan War	170
5.14.1. Phantom reflection of the Trojan War in the alleged III century A.D.	170
5.14.2. The Christian dating of the Trojan War	171
5.14.3. The datings of the Trojan War as offered by Hellanicus and Damastus	172
5.14.4. The Judean dating of the Trojan War	172
5.14.5. The Scaligerian dating of the Trojan War	173
5.15. The table of heroes who had fought in the XIII century war (Trojan = Tarquinian = Gothic) and their phantom doubles	173
6. The great triad of kings in Roman history: Sulla, Pompey and Caesar. The parallelism with the Trojan = Tarquinian = Gothic War	174
7. The rebellion of Spartacus as a vague and fragmented reflection of the Trojan = Tarquinian = Gothic War of the XIII century A.D.	194
8. A general picture of the 1053-year chronological shift	200
8.1. The identification of the First Roman Empire (Livy's Regal Rome) as the Third Roman Empire of the alleged III-VI century A.D. and the 1053-year shift	200
8.2. Identifying the Second Roman Empire as the Holy Roman Empire of the X-XIII century as well as the Habsburg Empire of the XIV-XVII century. Two shifts – of 1053 and 1400 years, respectively	200
8.3. Empire of the X-XIII century. The parallelism between the X century war and the “ancient” Trojan = Tarquinian = Gothic War	206
8.4. The “ancient” Second Roman Empire in the X-XII century A.D. and the XIII-XVII century A.D.	209
8.5. Identifying the Third Roman Empire as the Holy Roman Empire of the X-XIII century as well as the Habsburg Empire of the XIV-XVII century. A 720-year shift and a 1053-year shift	214
8.6. War of the XIII century as the original reflected in the “ancient” Trojan = Tarquinian = Gothic War	220

Chapter 3 Identifying “ancient” Greece as the mediaeval Greece of the XI-XVI century with the chronological shift of 1800 years taken into account

1. The Greek and the Biblical chronology	231
2. The legend of a woman (religion?) mortally insulted	232
3. The great “ancient” Greek colonization as the mediaeval crusades	236
4. Epoch of the tyrants	237
5. The Trojan War of the XIII century A.D. revisited. The version of Herodotus. The mediaeval Charles of Anjou identified as the Persian king Cyrus	240
6. Mediaeval traces of the “ancient” Homer in the XIII-XIV century. The famous mediaeval Saint-Omer clan	248
7. The famous rape of the Sabine women in the “ancient” Rome and the share-out of wives and daughters in early XIV century Greece. The foundation of Rome in Latini and later the Italian Rome in the XIV century A.D.	249
7.1. The rape of the Sabines	249
7.2. The “ancient” Romulus and Remus are the grandchildren of Aeneas the Trojan and the founders of Rome in Latini. This event apparently reflects the foundation of Rome in Italy at the end of the XIV century A.D.	250

7.3. A partial transplantation of the Romean history to the documents of Italian Rome from Constantinople in the XIV century A.D.	251
7.4. The original mediaeval tale of the foundation of Rome in XIV century Italy by Romulus and Remus	251
7.5. Frederic II of Sicily as the “ancient” Romulus?	252
8. The mediaeval Charles of Naples as the “ancient” King Cambyses	252
9. The mediaeval Frederick of Sicily as the “ancient” king Darius	253
10. Mediaeval Margaret as the “ancient” Mardonius	254
11. Mediaeval Matilda as the “ancient” Milthiades	256
12. The mediaeval Duke Walther as the “ancient” Xerxes the Great	258
13. The mediaeval 300 knights of Duke Jean de la Roche as the famous 300 Spartans of King Leonidas	261
14. The mediaeval war in Greece of 1374-1387 A.D. as the “ancient” Peloponnesian War	264
14.1. The three eclipses described by Thucydides	264
14.2. The congress in Greece. The beginning of the war	265
14.3. The mediaeval Navarrans as the “ancient” Spartans. The mediaeval Catalan state in Athens as the “ancient” Athenian state	267
14.4. The mediaeval Nerio as the “ancient” Lysander. The end of the Peloponnesian War	267
15. The date of Parthenon's construction, and the reason it was called the Temple of St. Mary	269
16. The mediaeval Gemisto Pleton as the “ancient” Plato	270
17. The mediaeval despotate of Mystras as the “ancient” Sparta	272
18. The Turkish Ottoman Empire as the “ancient” Macedon. Sultan Mohammed I as the “ancient” Philip II	274
19. The mediaeval siege of Constantinople (Byzantium) as the “ancient” siege of Byzantium	278
20. The fall of Byzantium as the end of “Classical” Greece in the alleged IV century B.C.	280
21. Amazingly similar volume graphs of “ancient” and mediaeval Greek “biographies”	294

Chapter 4 The superimposition of the Bible over the phantom and real Eurasian events of the Middle Ages after a shift of 1800 years

Introduction	297
1. Genesis 1-3. The tale of Adam and Eve. The fall and the banishment from Eden. These events of the XI-XVI century epoch were initially shifted by the chronologists into the VIII century B.C.	301
1.1. The description of the parallelism	301
1.2. Adam and Eve = Paris and Helen = Perseus and Andromeda = Jason and Medea = St. George and the princess	307
1.3. The apple shared by Adam and Eve as well as their “ancient” Greek duplicates Paris and Venus	314
2. Genesis 4-5. Cain and Abel, the murder of Abel and the separation of humanity into two nations. These events of the XI-XVI century A.D. were initially shifted to 753-520 B.C. by the chronologists	316
3. Genesis 6-9. The corruption of humanity. The deluge as punishment. Noah the Patriarch, the Ark, the Covenant and the Rainbow. These events of the XI-XVI century A.D. were initially shifted to 520-510 B.C. by the chronologists	317

4. Genesis 10. The offspring of the sons of Noah (Shem, Ham and Japhet). These events of the XI-XVI century A.D. were initially shifted into 510-82 B.C. by the chronologists	321
5. Genesis 11:1-9. The Tower of Babel. Confounded languages. The scattering of nations. These events of the XI-XVI century were initially shifted into the I century B.C. by the chronologists	322
6. Genesis 11:10-32. The offspring of Shem until Terah. These events of the XI-XVI century were initially shifted by the chronologists into the period between 82 B.C. and 217 or 250 A.D.	322
7. Genesis 12; 13:1. Early days of Abram, the struggle with the Pharaoh and the exodus from Egypt. These events of the XI-XVI century A.D. were initially shifted to 250-300 A.D. by the chronologists	323
8. Genesis 13:2-18; 14-38. Abram and Haran, the division into two kingdoms, Isaac, Esau, Jacob, Judas, and Joseph. These events of the XI-XVI century A.D. were initially shifted to 306-526 A.D. by the chronologists	325
9. Genesis 39-50. Exodus 1-14. Joseph, Moses, the war with the Pharaoh, the Exodus from Egypt and the defeat of Pharaoh's army. These events of the XI-XVI century were initially shifted to 476-535 A.D. by the chronologists	328
10. Exodus 15-40. Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy and Joshua. The people of Israel: wandering and conquering the promised land. These events of the XI-XVI century A.D. had initially been shifted into 550-800 A.D. by the chronologists	337
10.1. Moses and Justinian	337
10.2. Joshua, Son of Nun, and Alexander the Great	339
10.3. Joshua, Alexander the Great and the Argonauts	342
10.4. Joshua identified as Charlemagne. The mediaeval Song of Roland as the account of the mediaeval wars described in the Bible as the campaigns of Joshua, son of Nun	344
11. The events from the book of Judges dating to the XII-XVI century A.D. had initially been shifted to the VII-IX century A.D. by the chronologists	352
11.1. The Biblical Moab and the mediaeval Moaviya	352
11.2. The Biblical Abimelech and the "ancient" warlord Pyrrhus were both killed by a woman. The weapon used in both cases was a stone that had inflicted a mortal cranial wound	352
12. Further events of the Judges epoch (the XII-XVI century A.D.), which were initially shifted to 900-924 A.D. by the chronologists	354
12.1. The war with the Benjamites as the Trojan (Gothic) War	354
12.2. The sacrifice of the Biblical Jephthah's daughter as a reflection of the sacrifice of Iphigenia, Agamemnon's daughter	359
13. The events of the XII-XVI century A.D. as described in Judges, Samuel, Ruth and the Kings were initially shifted into 925-1053 A.D. by the chronologists	360
13.1. Saul, David and Solomon vs. Sulla, Caesar and Pompey. The rape of the daughters of Shiloh as the rape of the Sabines	360
13.2. The Biblical Arc of the Covenant and the Mohammedan Qa'aba	361
13.3. Saul, David and Solomon. The Temple of Solomon as the Temple of Hagia Sophia in Czar-Grad	362
13.4. The Biblical queen of Sheba as the Russian Princess Olga	362

14. The history of the Kingdom of Judah of the XIII-XVI century A.D. had initially been shifted to the XI-XIII century A.D. by the chronologists	367
14.1. A reign duration superimposition of the Judaic kingdom and the Eastern, or Byzantine, part of the Third Roman Empire	367
14.2. The biographical parallelism between the Judean kingdom and the Third Roman Empire in the East	374
15. The end of the Kingdom of Judah and the Babylon Captivity were shifted into distant past by the Chronologists	391
16. The Biblical Babylonian captivity reflected as the Avignon captivity in the allegedly French and Roman mediaeval chronicles	399
17. Why the era of Hijrah (Hegira) is counted from the VII century A.D.	402
17.1. A brief overview	402
17.2. On the history of the Koran	404
17.3 The Biblical Ark and the Muslim Qa'aba	405
18. In re the Biblical books of Samuel, Kings and Chronicles	409

Annexes

1. The methods of discovering discrepancies in random processes and their application to the analysis of historical texts	413
2. The discovery of homogeneous and heterogeneous fragments inside Russian, Roman and Greek chronicles, as well as the Bible	416
1. Introduction	416
2. Discrepancies in Russian chronicles	417
3. Discrepancies in the works of Titus Livy and Baronius	420
4. Discrepancies in the “History” of Herodotus and the “History” of Tacitus	420
5. Discrepancies in the Bible	421
3. The authorial invariant in Russian literary texts. Its application: who was the real author of the “Quiet Don”?	425
Commentary by A. T. Fomenko	425
1. Introduction. A brief excursus into the history of the problem	425
2. The definition of an authorial invariant	426
3. Our approach. Samples and steps. The evolution of a parameter along the narrative	427
4. The experiment in action. The list of parameters studied	428
5. The list of authors and works studied	429
6. The calculation experiment	431
7. The results of the experiment	431
8. Function word usage frequency as the authorial invariant	432
9. Quantitative examples	433
10. The possible uses of the authorial invariant. Its potential for the discovery of plagiarisms	435
11. The statistical analysis of the works of M. A. Sholokhov. The authorial invariant of “The Quiet Don” is drastically different from the authorial invariant of all the other works written by M. A. Sholokhov	436
12. Observations of a secondary nature. Chronology and volume of Sholokhov’s publications	440

13. The analysis of several texts by F. D. Kryukov	442
14. A detailed table of function word distribution in M. A. Sholokhov's texts	443
Bibliography to Annex 3	443
4. Literary and archaeological falsifications.....	445
1. Literary forgeries	445
2. Archaeological forgeries	449

Tables to Annex 2

1. The chapter volume function in the “History” of Herodotus	457
2. The chapter volume function in the Bible (standard canonical chapters)	463

The complete bibliography to the seven volumes	477
---	-----